

Another Business Man May be Candidate for Mayor

RUMOR SAYS ANOTHER PROMINENT MAN IS BEING URGED TO RUN.

O. H. MARTIN FOR COMMISSIONER

Merchant Asked to Enter Race—A Good List of Candidates Will Be Secured.

It is understood that there will be another candidate for mayor and that Messrs. Brinton, Maloney and Bovey will not have the field to themselves. A prominent business man is being groomed for the race, so the men say. As to who the man will be, is a question. The information comes from apparently reliable source, but whether the report is reliable or rumor remains to be seen. It is too early in the campaign to consider nominations closed.

Two must win primary day. The big municipal battle is on election day, when the two nominees battle for supremacy.

Must Nominate Eight.

The people must nominate eight candidates for commissioner. They must be elected. Thus far none of the candidates for commissioner will lose out, for the number has not reached the limit. It is possible that there will be thirty candidates go before the primary. There were no new candidates yesterday.

O. H. Martin is being talked of for commissioner. It is hoped Mr. Martin will consent to go before the people. He has a fund of knowledge about how a city should be run and if he is successful the city will profit by his experience and knowledge of municipal affairs.

Until yesterday Collins Dysart was a prospective candidate. His friends thought they had about pulled him into the limelight, but Mr. Dysart says he will not become a candidate for commissioner.

There are a number of people wondering what Alderman Andrew Graff of the Second ward is going to do. Mr. Graff has said that he thought he would run for commissioner but apparently he is not ready to make his wants known to the public.

By next week the campaign will be on in good shape and the several candidates will be busy gathering in the supporters and wondering what the harvest will be.

Dixon adopted the commission form of government because it was believed better results would be obtained in conducting city affairs under the new form. Now the voters have the opportunity to put good men in office. Will they profit by the chance?

H. C. Dixon Candidate.

Alderman H. C. Dixon announced this morning that he had decided to allow himself to be drawn into the political maelstrom and is a candidate for commissioner. He started his petition this morning.

Dysart Not Eligible.

Collins Dysart makes the following statement for the benefit of his friends who have been urging him to become a candidate for commissioner:

"My name having been brought forward by friends as a possible candidate for one of the commissioners of this city, I wish to inform all that on account of an interest in a franchise in this city I am not eligible for office. Collins Dysart."

NACHUSA STORE AGAIN BURGLARIZED

ABOUT ALL MR. CRAWFORD HAS MISSED WAS $5 FROM THE MONEY DRAWER.

The general store at Nachusa, owned by E. L. Crawford was broken into Thursday night by one or more burglars and ransacked. The vandals did not secure much loot, however, and as far as could be ascertained their haul only netted them $5, taken from the till.

It has become quite the style up at Nachusa to break into Crawford's store, but most all fads die out after awhile, and Crawford hopes this one will. He says he is getting used to being burglarized, however.

SCIENTIFIC REASON FOR FOAM ON RIVER

SOFT WATER FROM MELTIN
ICE MIXING WITH HARD
WATER OF RIVER

MINERALS EJECTED BY FROST

Scientist Says Water From Melted Ice Is Soft and Pure for Use

People who cross the bridge or pass within sight of the dam have been interested during the past few days of thawing weather in the amount of feathery foam which has collected below the dam in billowy piles. There has been considerable speculation as to the cause of this foam and inquiry was made of S. N. Watson, the ice man, who gives the scientific explanation.

The dilution of the hard water of the river by the soft water melting ice on the river and banks and its agitation in flowing over the dam is the cause of the drifts of foam. It is not generally known that there is less mineral matter, which makes water hard, in the ice than in the water from which it is obtained, so that when the ice melts the water on the ice is softer than the water under the ice.

Prof. John C. Sparks, B. S., F. C. S., of New York recently investigated nature's wonderful power of eliminating minerals that harden water by freezing. In a paper read before the Natural Ice Association of America entitled "Water from Melted Ice for Domestic Use" he gives the results of his chemical analysis of water and ice from lakes and rivers which show almost a complete elimination of minerals by freezing. Among other things he says:

"If stored natural ice, free from any adhering particles, is melted and the resulting water placed in a sterilized container, the product will be on a par to the spring water as it comes from the spring, and thereby eliminates the chances of infection which spring water is always subject to by its method of delivery."

Investigations in New York have also shown that typhoid has never been directly traced to ice, and that during the greatest consumption of ice the typhoid mortality is the lowest. The professor says that a more extensive use of ice as drinking water would aid in the reduction of typhoid fever.

Wm. R. Snyder of the Dixon high school.

Friday Col. Brown talked to the pupils of the two high schools about the birds and the young people were delighted with his interesting descriptive stories. He has spent the entire week speaking at different schools in the state, and devotes much of his time to this good work. He loves nature and he loves the children and is helping the children to know more of nature. The colonel will remain over Sunday and speak Monday morning in some of the school buildings which he did not have time to visit Friday. In the afternoon he will speak at Coppins' Commercial school.

In speaking of his visit at the high schools Friday Col. Brown said that in all of his travels he never spent a happier day away from home, for the teachers were so courteous and the children so attentive and quiet that he felt his visit had accomplished its purpose.

MAY NOT CONTINUE CHICKEN SHOWS HERE

DIXON ASSOCIATION HAS PRO-VIDED THREE EXCELLENT
SHOWS IN PAST.

PATRONAGE NOT SUFFICIENT

Camp Out Behind Financially; Sterling May Be Given Dixon's Aid Next Year.

There are ten chances to one that Dixon will have no poultry show next winter. For three winters the local association of chicken fanciers held an exhibition that proved to be in point of exhibits and interest one of the best in this section of the state but this year and last the association lost money, because of lack of patronage.

At a meeting of the various committees last evening at Youngman's coal office it was discovered in checking over the expenses that the association lost $60. The amount the association went behind a year ago was $40. It was believed last year that this year would be an exception and that a neat sum would be realized from an exhibition. The association went ahead and put on a much better show than the two years previous but notwithstanding this enterprise on the part of the local chicken men the people of Dixon are not yet ready for chicken shows.

The first exhibition held here the association cleared $170. That fact created a desire to do better but it seems luck has been against the association.

Sterling Wants Show.

Sterling wants a chicken show next winter and it is probable that the local association will turn in and give the chicken fanciers of Sterling assistance in giving a first class exhibition there next winter.

Sterling has done well by the three exhibitions given here and it will be only fair now that Dixon assist the Sterling men.

A regular meeting of the local association will be held Feb. 19 at Mr. Youngman's office and the matter of holding a show next year will be discussed.

STERLING VOTED AGAINST NEW PLAN

COMMISSION PLAN LOST BY MAR-GIN OF BUT FOUR VOTES.

Sterling failed to carry the commission form of municipal government proposition in the special election Friday by the small margin of four votes. The vote in favor of the proposition was 578 and against it, 582. The change was strongly opposed by the city administration and an almost equally strong fight was put up in favor of the change by the organization which believed Sterling's interests could be better cared for by the new form.

MAGAZINE WRITER FINALLY STIRS THE BIG COMPANY INTO ACTION

LARGE SUMS SOUGHT IN SUITS

Broadway Magazine Company Also Defendant; Claimed Company Had Poisoned Foods.

New York, Jan. 28.—The Standard Oil company has had a lot of unpleasant things said about it one time and another, as John D. Archbold once pointed out in a magazine article, but it has never taken its troubles into court until summonses were obtainable in the United States circuit court in two suits for heavy damages brought by the Standard Oil company against the Broadway Magazine company, publishers of Hampton's Magazine, and Cleveland Moffett, author of the alleged libelous article, which caused the obitopus to turn.

Mr. Moffett in an article in the February issue of Hampton's, headed "Cassidy and the Food Poisoners," wrote that Standard Oil had secured a monopoly of the glucose sugar industry and was making the product more attractive to the eye by whitening it by the use of sulphites. Mr. Moffett pointed out that glucose is used in candy making and added that agents of Standard Oil in eastern Pennsylvania and lower New Jersey "had been arrested, brought into court and branded as deliberate poisoners of little children."

The sentence about the poisoning of little children hurt, and the snarling of the wound was not soothed any by the stream of clippings from the article which began to come in every mail to the Standard Oil office at 26 Broadway. It is said that copies of the article were also received by many offices of the corporation, and that the senders had taken care to mark the excerpt quoted. The fact that the corporation is now fighting in the courts for the right to exist, made the attack as a representative of the company said, "unfortunate at this time." The result was that the corporation broke its rule and began suit for $250,000 against Hampton's, and for $100,000 against Cleveland Moffett.

Before starting the action, Martin Carey, attorney for the company and J. L. C. Clarke, its press representative called upon the magazine to retract. They denied that Standard Oil is interested in glucose, or that the men referred to in Mr. Moffett's article as having been branded as "deliberate poisoners of little children," were representatives of Standard Oil. Mr. Moffett was present when the Standard Oil representatives made the demand, and after consulting with him, Benjamin B. Hampton, editor of the magazine decided to stand pat.

The article called "Cassidy and the Food Poisoners," deals with the campaign for the enforcement of pure food laws made by Harry P. Cassidy, a food inspector in Philadelphia.

CHAPTER XVII.

PROBABLY nothing ever gave rise to more comment in Radville than Betty Graham's departure to spend the winter at a boarding school near Philadelphia. Hardly any one knew anything about it—in fact, the rumor of it was just being noised about and contemptuously discredited on all hands—when Tracey galloped down Main street Monday morning with the news that she had left on the early train.

Radville was at first stupefied, then clamorous, but there was little information to be got out of old Sam.

Duncan himself refused to be interviewed. He told everybody who had the impudence to mention the matter to him that it was Mr. Graham's affair. Mr. Graham was a substantial business man, he said, and if he chose to send his daughter away to school he had a perfect right to do so.

One direct result of it all was to hasten Josie's own leave taking. It would never do to let the Grahams eclipse the Lockwoods, you see. Josie had been talking of going to a school in Maryland, but Betty's move to a fashionable center like Philadelphia made her change her mind, and arrangements were made by which Josie was able to go Betty one better. A young ladies' seminary in New York city itself received Josie. She left us bereaved about a week after Betty vanished from our ken, but promised to be back for the Christmas holidays. Betty was happy, she protested in every communication, and wholly content. She was getting along. The other girls liked her, and she liked them, these statements being made in the order of their relative importance. Lots of them, of course, were frightfully swell (Betty annexed "frightfully" at school, by the bye) and had all sorts of clothes. The drug store, not to be outdone, supplied her with a party gown for state occasions.

Josie kept her promise and came home for Christmas. She was reticent as to her impressions of the New York seminary, but seemed extremely glad to be home, notwithstanding the fact that Nat had apparently contracted no disturbing alliances with the other belles of our village. And Roland remained true—a reliable second string to Josie's bow. Roland was working hard at the bank, with an application that earned Blinky Lockwood's regard and outspoken approbation, and his Christmas raiment proved the sensation of the season.

In passing I should mention that Betty didn't come home once throughout the entire school term. The Christmas and Easter holidays she spent with a girl friend at her Philadelphia home.

Meanwhile life in our town simmered gently. Duncan continued to make progress. For one thing I recall that he put in hot soda with whipped cream, which helped a lot to hold the trade regained in the summer from Sothern & Lee.

Occasionally Duncan visited some of the towns in the county to develop the mail order business which he had successfully inaugurated and which increased materially the profits of the firm.

There was a certain night along toward the 1st of January when trade was dull, as it always is after Christmas, and there was nobody in the store save Nat and Tracey. Each had their task, whatever it may have been, and each was busy with it, but of the two Tracey seemed the more restless.

Duncan broke a long silence in the store. "What's the trouble, Tracey?" Tracey pulled up with a stare of confusion. "I—I dunno, Mr. Duncan; I was thinkin', I guess."

"Anything gone wrong?"

"Not yet."

"Somebody been demonstrating that your doll's stuffed with sawdust, Tracey?"

"No-o; but, say, Mr. Duncan"—Tracey's confusion became terrific.

"Say on, Mr. Tanner."

Tracey struggled perceptibly. The words when they came were blurted. "Ah, I was only thinkin' 'bout Angie."

"Do you ever think about anything else?"

"No," Tracey admitted honestly, "not much. But I was wonderin'—"

"Well?"

"Are you stuck on Angie, Mr. Duncan?" demanded Tracey desperately.

"Great snakes! I hope not!"

The boy sighed. "Thank you, Mr."

nothing," said she had a headache and was goin' home. Roland went with her, but she didn't want him to. You just missed seein' her."

"Heavens, what a blow!"

"But Roland's takin' her home needn't upset you none."

"Thank you for those kind words, Tracey." Nat sighed and passed a troubled hand across his brow. "You're a true friend."

"I'm tryin' to be, Nat, same's you are to me." Tracey thought this over.

"But you ain't foolin' me, are you?" he asked presently. "I mean 'bout bein' a true friend?"

"Why should I?"

"Ah, I dunno. You're so cur'us sometimes. I ain't never sure whether you mean what you're sayin' or not."

"Oh, don't say that."

"Well, I ain't the only one. Everybody in town says they don't understand you half the time."

Duncan moved over to Tracey. His face was entirely serious. "Tracey," he said, dropping a hand on the boy's shoulder, "do you know, nothing in life is harder to bear than not to be understood?"

Tracey wrestled with this for a moment, but it was beyond him.

"Then why the dickens don't you talk so's folks 'll know what it's about?" he demanded heatedly.

"Because—hm." Duncan hesitated, with his enigmatic smile. "Well, because the rules don't require it."

"What'd you mean by that?" Tracey exploded.

Nat couldn't explain, so he countered neatly. "This is one of your Angie evenings, isn't it, Tracey?"

"Yep, but—"

"Well, you hurry along. I'll close up the shop."

To Duncan, now seated on the edge of an upturned box in a corner of the store, came an idea. He drew a roll of bills from his pocket and stripped off the top one.

"Here's $5," he said to Tracey. "Girls can usually be captured by judicious expenditures. I wish you luck."

"Ah, thanks, Mr. Duncan."

"But, Tracey—"

The boy paused at the door. "What?"

"Remember what I told you. Don't you make too much love. Let Angie do that."

"Gosh, that 'll be the hardest rule of all for me!" A shadow clouded Tracey's honest eyes. "But I got to do it that way, anyway. I can't ask her to marry me yit. I can't afford to get married."

"It's a contrary world, Tracey, a contrary world."

"What?"

"Remember what I told you. Don't you make too much love. Let Angie do that."

"Gosh, that 'll be the hardest rule of all for me!" A shadow clouded Tracey's honest eyes. "But I got to do it that way, anyway. I can't ask her to marry me yit. I can't afford to get married."

"Heavens, what a blow!"

"But Roland's takin' her home needn't upset you none."

"Thank you for those kind words, Tracey." Nat sighed and passed a troubled hand across his brow. "You're a true friend."

"I'm tryin' to be, Nat, same's you are to me." Tracey thought this over.

"But you ain't foolin' me, are you?" he asked presently. "I mean 'bout bein' a true friend?"

"Why should I?"

"Ah, I dunno. You're so cur'us sometimes. I ain't never sure whether you mean what you're sayin' or not."

"Oh, don't say that."

"Well, I ain't the only one. Everybody in town says they don't understand you half the time."

Duncan moved over to Tracey. His face was entirely serious. "Tracey," he said, dropping a hand on the boy's shoulder, "do you know, nothing in life is harder to bear than not to be understood?"

Tracey wrestled with this for a moment, but it was beyond him.

"Then why the dickens don't you talk so's folks 'll know what it's about?" he demanded heatedly.

"Because—hm." Duncan hesitated, with his enigmatic smile. "Well, because the rules don't require it."

"What'd you mean by that?" Tracey exploded.

Nat couldn't explain, so he countered neatly. "This is one of your Angie evenings, isn't it, Tracey?"

"Yep, but—"

"Well, you hurry along. I'll close up the shop."

To Duncan, now seated on the edge of an upturned box in a corner of the store, came an idea. He drew a roll of bills from his pocket and stripped off the top one.

"Here's $5," he said to Tracey. "Girls can usually be captured by judicious expenditures. I wish you luck."

"Ah, thanks, Mr. Duncan."

"But, Tracey—"

The boy paused at the door. "What?"

"Remember what I told you. Don't you make too much love. Let Angie do that."

"Gosh, that 'll be the hardest rule of all for me!" A shadow clouded Tracey's honest eyes. "But I got to do it that way, anyway. I can't ask her to marry me yit. I can't afford to get married."

JANUARY 28 1911

Fifty Years Ago Today.
Jan. 28.

Governor Pickens announced as the ultimatum of South Carolina that Fort Sumter would be taken by force unless the United States would surrender it peacefully.

Samuel Chester Reid, hero of the famous fight in the United States privateer General Armstrong against a whole British squadron in the Azores in 1814, died in New York city; born 1784.

Twenty-five Years Ago Today.

Bismarck, the German chancellor, informed parliament that Germany would never consent to the restoration of Poland, but would expend $75,000,000 in buying out the Poles and peopling their land with Germans. He also threatened to gag parliament should it thwart the will of the emperor.

The Great Dairy Industry.

The clean milk problem is a vital one, affecting the production and consumption of over 9,000,000,000 gallons in the United States per year, being an annual supply of over 100 gallons for every man, woman, and child in the country. This amount affords 1.1 quart per day for every individual, which includes the milk used in making butter and cheese. The actual amount of whole milk consumed each day averages about .65 of a pint for every individual. According to a Connecticut Station Bulletin the value of this product for a year at retail is the startling sum of $2,500,000,000. This is about one-fiftieth of the entire wealth of the nation, five times the wholesale value of last year's wheat crop, and over twice the value of the corn crop, and over one-third of the entire value of farm products for 1907, which is estimated at $7,400,000,000. The wholesale value of dairy products last year was estimated at $800,000,000, which would allow a price of less than ten cents a gallon for milk at the dairy. An average retail price of 7 cents a quart was assumed, which is probably a little below the average price.—New Orleans Picayune.

Another Touch.

"Maria," said Mr. Stubbs, as he looked through his waistcoat, "Where are those two $10 notes I had?"

"Why, I took them, John," responded Mrs. Stubbs, innocently. "Didn't you say I could have any thing I found under a dollar?"

"Yes, but—"

"Well, they were both under a dollar. The dollar was on top."

One Kind of a Bird.

Said the maiden fair in the cafe, "I eat no more than a bird."

Said her escort later when he saw the check: "Well upon my word, When I have liquidated this bill I'll not have a single cent; Therefore methinks an ostrich is The kind of a bird she meant."

Grown Scarcer.

"People don't seem to see as many sea serpents as they used to," remarked the guest.

"No," answered the summer landlord. "I don't know whether to attribute it to local option or the pure food law."

Later Ones Have Degenerated.

Scott—What makes you think that the trust originated in Rhode Island?

Mott—Dad used to speak of the trust in Providence as far back as when I was a boy.

This meeting promises to be one of unusual interest.

Glee Club Entertained.

On last Friday evening in Franklin Grove the Glee club of that town gave an entertainment in the Presbyterian church in which two of our talented Dixon people took a prominent part. There was a chorus of 30 voices, many numbers on the pipe organ and solos and readings. Mrs. Lew Edwards of Dixon rendered several solos and the Franklin Grove Reporter says, "She sang beautifully and received hearty applause from the audience. She is the possessor of a beautiful soprano voice and the selections rendered were pleasing to hear. She was accompanied by Miss Sunday."

Mrs. Van Spankeren of this city gave the readings on the program and was also most graciously received. Of her the Franklin Reporter says: "The readings portrayed by Mrs. Ethel Leland Van Spankeren of Dixon given in her winsome manner held the undivided attention of the audience throughout."

Box Social a Success.

The ladies of the Christian church are happy over the success of their box social given at the home of Mrs. Lucy Rosbrook last evening. Delightful Party.

Clyde Courtright and Wm. McPipin and Misses Olive Hart and Florence Crawford were the victims of a surprise Thursday afternoon at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Meppin of Dixon avenue. A large company of friends being aware of the approaching marriage of the young people, planned and carried out the pleasant affair and it was great fun watching the happy but embarrassed young folks untie the parcels and read the accompanying poetry. Eight little girls came to say farewell to Miss Bessie Miller at her home this afternoon as Bessie will soon move to the country. Games and music were enjoyed and a delicious supper was served. All had a good time and the little friends are sorry Bessie is to leave them.

Musical Enjoyed.

Twenty was the number of guests who gathered at the home of Mrs. Wm. Stark last evening at 1212 West Morgan street, and listened to the excellent program of music rendered under the auspices of the ladies of the W. C. T. U. The beautiful home of Mr. and Mrs. Stark was prettily decorated with pink and white carnations.

The piano solo by Clinton Fahrney was splendidly given and was encored. Robert Anderson, who was down for a solo, was not present. Miss Webster gave a very interesting reading and was enthusiastically encored and I. B. Holdren rendered a cornet solo and violin solo. The cornet solo was creditably given, but the violin solo inspired his hearers and made them realize that a great future lies before him in his command of this beautiful instrument. Mrs. Lew Edwards, who sang in place of Mrs. Frank Balou, was heartily encored. She sang "He Was a Prince," as her first number and responded with a song equally as sweet, displaying her strong, melodious tones to advantage. Another favorite on the program was Mrs. A. G. Burnham and she always pleases, as she reads in a charming, unaffected manner. The entire program was a treat and afterward appetizing refreshments were served and the guests then left for their homes, refreshed mentally and physically. A silver offering was taken.

Much credit for the success of the program is due Miss Bertha Bennett.

CHEAPNESS OF INVESTMENTS.

All the world agrees that the cost of living never was more oppressive and investments are cheap everywhere. It is the world's best securities which have fallen most in every nation, and as a rule this fall is occurring at a time of general prosperity. Nobody needs to be told that we are now reaping our largest harvest and within a day or two we have been surprised by the improvement in our foreign trade. Conditions in England are even more pronouncedly favorable. In the same week that consols fell to the lowest for two generations British foreign trade, like our own, exceeded the best previous experience. Yet nobody needs to be told that our investment market is depressed, and that the animation in the speculative market is not viewed with favor as being altogether wholesome. These are singular symptoms. Why should prices fall when interest never was more secure and dividends larger? Is it a mere change in price and are values not affected, reactor upward to old levels being probable? Or is this singular condition due to the greater supply of gold? There is almost unanimity that one thing is not the cause of a fall of prices currently with prosperity. There is no question of credit now troubling the world, and if there were any disturbance of commercial credits it could not affect consols, or New York City bonds, or others of that class.—New York Times.

Reassured the Judge.

A wife, joining her husband in a conveyance of real estate, was asked by the judge, who examined her in private, according to the act of the assembly, whether she acted without compulsion on the part of her husband. She stuck her arms akimbo and replied: "He compel me! No, not twenty like him!"—Argonaut.

A Legal View.

"The Bible says that no man can serve two masters."

"Yes, That's probably the first law against bigamy ever put down."—Cleveland Leader.

"I guess the airship is here to stay."

"Why so?"

"I see they have begun to quarrel as regards the advantages of the respective types."

Probably David concluded that there was more safety in saying that all men were liars than in trying to prove an individual case.

From the viewpoint of a pretty woman in front of a mirror, an honest man isn't the noblest work of the Creator.

GAVE LECTURE ON WORLD'S WONDERLAND

R. J. BENNETT DELIGHTED AUDI-ENCE AT "Y" FRIDAY NIGHT.

PICTURED YELLOWSTONE PARK

Stereopticon Views Were Magnificent and Talk Was Greatly Enjoyed By All.

R. J. Bennett of Ravenswood (we ought to say of Dixon, for he has done so much for Dixon and has so much in common with Dixon people that we feel we can lay claim upon him) delivered a lecture at the Y. M. C. A. rooms Friday evening upon "The Wonderland of the World." The lecture was given under the auspices of the B. G. M. club and it is unfortunate indeed that there were so many counter attractions which cut down the attendance, for the lecture was a delightful description of a two weeks' outing spent in Yellowstone Park.

Mr. Bennett is a man whose education and refinement of thought have put him in tune with the beauties of nature and his talk about the wonders of the national park afforded a charming setting for the magnificent stereopticon pictures which accompanied the lectures. Rev. Stone operated the machine and brought out to the best advantage the clear-cut views of the marvelous wonder of nature in canons, waterfalls, forests, rivers, cliffs, mountains lakes and geysers to be found in that country nowhere duplicating in grandeur.

Preceding the lecture Master Willie Worley, 11 years of age, played a number of excellent piano selections. The boys have a fine club at the "Y" and they were there in good number to hear the lecture and enjoyed it immensely.

DEMENT TOWN DOINGS

Thank you, we surely do hope we will celebrate many more birthdays. A birthday only comes once a year you know, so if we have a good time out of the ordinary, pass it over.

Just like spring on the avenue this morning. No robins yet. Will the poet of the avenue have one in shape when the robins come.

Roy: I wonder who the girl was that purchased the melon seeds from me. Will she want tomato plants?

M. Maloney: You remember what said at the men's club about Strlin: voting down the commission form or government if Dixon adopted it. Well I was right, wasn't I? Sometimes I know what I'm talking about.

JOSEPH DELOISEY VOLUNTARY BANKRUPT

WEST BROOKLYN MAN FILED HIS PETITION WITH REFEREE
TODAY.

Joseph Deloisey of West Brooklyn appeared before Henry S. Dixon, referee in bankruptcy, today and filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy. His liabilities are given at $591 and his assets, $557.

The first meeting of creditors was held in Mr. Dixon's office this afternoon and later a trustee will be appointed. It is claimed that Mrs. Deloisey holds the greater portion of the property and Deloisey is unable to realize enough to satisfy his creditors. Mrs. Deloisey is unwilling to give up the property.

THE PEOPLE'S COLUMN.

MORE LIGHT NEEDED

Editor Telegraph:

I wish through the medium of your columns to call attention to the fact that the electric light company of this city has been in the habit of shutting off the arc lights in the morning before it is fully daylight. It seems to me that the city of Dixon pays enough rental per light per year to this company to assure light when it is needed. I am a working girl and each morning I leave my home for the factory at 6:25 a. m. or 6:30, and I have noticed that the lights go out before it is quite light enough to see very well. On the morning of Jan. 26, for instance they were turned off at 6:30, just as the whistle blew. The morning was foggy, and as you all know, the sidewalks and crossings are very icy and slippery and there fore dangerous to walk on even in broad daylight. Imagine then (those of you who do not have to go to work so early) how inconvenient it is to try to make your way in the dark. Let us have light a little longer in the morning.

OSTEOPATHY

WHAT OPIE READ HAS TO SAY ABOUT OSTEOPATHY.

Man constantly finds something new about himself, and it is thus that he world moves. From the dawn of time as he has been his own study, and is even yet a mine of mystery unto himself. We reverence the old, and yet we know that the school boy of today is wiser than the sage of long ago.

Theory becomes science, science evolves itself into a commonplace fact and we wonder that we were so slow to accept so manifest a truth.

Good health is natural. Nature's aim is to be free from disease. To die before extreme old age is unnatural. There is something wrong with the running of a machine that wears out so soon; an observant machinist can often repair the evil. Man is a machine and recently there has come into notice a school of medical machinists to regulate the machine-man—Osteopathy. Most cheerfully do I subscribe to this new science. I have felt the benefit of it and most cheerfully do I ascribe to this new science. I do honestly believe it to be one of the most wonderful discoveries of my age.

My attention was first called to Osteopathy by a friend whose wife had been cured of insanity. Closely following I knew of a prominent man who had been cured of paralysis. Shortly afterward while I was sick in bed with the grip, I sent for an Osteopath and with one treatment he cured me. I took treatment at another time after that and underwent complete physical regeneration. It was weathered me through attacks of out and various ills. I know that Osteopathic treatment once or twice a year fits me for work as nothing else could and it increases my capacity for labor.

I find that some of the greatest physicians have endorsed this wonderful departure in the treatment of diseases, some of them unconscious. Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes, dear to American letters, a graduate of Harvard, a medical man of renown, the professor of anatomy and physiology at Harvard for many years, once declared that if all the medicine on earth were dumped into the sea it would be a mighty good thing for mankind, but a mighty bad thing for he fishes, he knew, too.

The Osteopath with infinite labor adjusts the bones, relaxes undue tension on the part of the ligaments, normalizes and puts the misfit muscles into their traces, reduces false pressure, stimulates and relaxes or desensitizes the network of nerves that control the functions of every organ of the body. He frees the life forces and currents. Nerve centers are manipulated by delicate, manual pressures, so that by stimulating or desensitizing he controls the heart's action.

The Osteopath can regulate the action of the stomach, bowels, liver, kidneys, pancreas and other organs. By a pressure on the vaso-motor center, which controls the caliber of the arteries, he reduces the temperature of fevers several degrees in as many minutes. Medicine points with pride to ingenuity and bewildering complexity of its theories. "Osteopathy asks the public to look at results."

DIXON COLLEGE, 15;
ACADEMY, 2
The Military Academy team went down to defeat to the Dixon College Midgits Thursday night in the college gymnasium in one of the hardest fought games of the season. The Academy boys are a plucky lot and made the Midgits work for every point.
F. Peckham, playing center for the Midgits, outclassed his man at every turn, while Bratfish and Keenan as forwards put up a hard fight. Superior guarding by Houghtby and Gebhardt for the Midgits held the Soldiers to one field goal.
Bratfish for the Midgits was easily the star, making three field goals and five points on fouls.
About 150 people were present and showed their enthusiasm for both teams by cheers.

Dramatic Notes

DIXON OPERA HOUSE.

On Tuesday, Jan. 31, Miss Daisy Cameron, the Broadway favorite will appear in C. Herbert Kerr's brand new comedy, "Nancy," at the Dixon opera house.

This character is a continuation of her famous character, "Little Dolle Dimples," which we all liked so well.

Her supporting company is an exceptionally fine one and the production is carried in its entirety by the company.

Dainty and petite Daisy Cameron, formerly leading lady with Little Dolle Dimples; Piff, Paff, Puff; DeWolf Hopper; The Tenderfoot; When John Comes Marching Home, etc., is coming to us in a brand new four act comedy from the pen of the eminent young author, C. Herbert Kerr, who wrote Dolle Dimples; Over the Fence; A Trip to Egypt; The Beauty Doctor, etc. The title of the new play is "Nancy" and the character is that of a little country miss, simple but good. The play abounds in comedy situations and the dialogue is amusing throughout.

Miss Cameron's great soprano will be heard in several high class numbers written specially for the production, and she will be ably supported by a company of artists, direct from New York City.

ROSE THEATRE.

A special attraction will be seen at the Rose theatre Monday and Tuesday afternoons and evenings when there will be a 3000 foot moving picture taken on the 101 Ranch accompanied by a lecture by Chief Ogalaga Fire from the ranch, who is one of the Sioux braves who assisted in Custer's last charge. He will be accompanied by Harry Newton, one of the agents from the Miller Bros.' 101 Ranch. The chief is 87 years old and bears 90 marks of wounds received in the battle against Gen. Custer's forces on the Little Big Horn river. His story will be of great interest.

FAMILY THEATRE

Hundreds of people are flocking to the Family theatre to try to solve the mystery of Fontinelle. It is surely a mystery. What is it? That is what all who have seen it say. The general belief is that it is a human being. It is great. That tells the story.

Paul Rahn and his four London girls are clever entertainers. They can sing and dance and coming just previous to Fontinelle their songs put the people in a humor to receive the wonderful Fontinelle.

The pictures tonight are good. A scene at the seashore between two men, sports, and their wives, not sports, brings down the house and holds it down for ten minutes.

CHEVALIER REMAINS

IN CHICAGO
Although it has been announced that Albert Chevalier's engagement in "Daddy Dufard" in the Princess theatre would come to an end Saturday night of the second week, Jan. 21, the time originally set by his brief contract, so successful has the famous comedian been in his new comedy that the engagement has been extended until further notice.

Act 3 has proved a novelty. Not only is it a realistic exhibition of behind the scenes, but it permits the star to interpolate without asking for the much abused dramatic license many of the songs he has made famous, such as The Workhouse Man; Right as Ninepence, and Mrs. Enery 'Awkins. The children are delighted with the matinees and last Saturday's was thronged with little ones.

The popular Wednesday matinees, with $1 for the best seats and the fine balcony at 50 cents and 75 cents a seat, are continued for the Chevalier engagement in Daddy Dufard.

SUN TEMPLE IS BARED TO LIGHT

WORK OF PREHISTORIC HANDS IS FOUND UNDER ROMAN COLOSSEUM.

USED FOR CONTESTS

Building Discovered in Dorchester, England as Result of Accident.

London, England.—Remains of a sun temple of prehistoric origin have been discovered on the site of the great Roman colosseum at Maumbury Rings, near Dorchester, in the southwest of England. Important as are the excavations in the Colosseum itself, they are overshadowed in archaeological importance by the finds beneath the chalk floor of the 196-foot in diameter ring where the Britons in Caesar's time fought wild beasts in the presence of a vast concourse of spectators.

According to St. George Gray, those who dug out the original temple of sun worship used red deer antlers as picks. Flint flakes, cores and hammer stones, too, have been found. Formerly there rested on the surface near the entrance to the temple a sighting stone, used, as is believed, in connection with the observations of the sun, moon and stars. In 1846 a farmer who regarded the stone merely as an obstruction to his plow rolled it away and buried it.

As for the colosseum, the excavations have now gone far enough to show it was the greatest of its kind in England in Roman times. The amphitheater was a double theater, banked high around with seats. In the amphitheater took place public contests of men with men, men with beasts and other displays. The ancient arena belongs to the Duchy of Cornwall. At first the arena was surrounded with a plain earth embankment 21 to 29 feet high. In later times the inner side of the embankment facing the arena was terraced into seats. The whole thing was 345x333 feet in its area. The floor of the arena was cut out of the virgin chalk and was hard and level.

The den where the beasts were kept has been discovered. The arena was bounded all around the inner wall, and the terraced ring of spectators' seats. The purpose evidently was to provide a place of refuge into which the men who fought the beasts could jump and secrete themselves when desperately pressed by the beasts. Such a wall and trench would be of service only in the case of bulls, and inasmuch as the continental bull rings have a similar arrangement, it is regarded as proof that the Maumbury colosseum was used for bull fighting in Roman days as well as for contests with wild beasts.

The skulls and bones of human beings have been excavated from the arena and its side chambers, but there is as yet no means of judging how many people lost their lives in the early English gladiatorial and wild beast combats. Many Roman and ancient British relics have come to light there.

The finding of a Queen Elizabeth sixpenny coin of 1544 on the interior terrace would appear to indicate the arena was used for contests as late as that queen's day. About three inches below the turf line of the interior terrace and apparently above the Roman deposits, have been found two human male skeletons, lying side by side, the right leg of one crossing the left leg of the other. One of the men was more than six feet tall and the other about five feet eight inches. Maumbury was adapted into a fort in the civil war of 1642-3, and was garrisoned by the parliamentary forces to oppose the earl of Cornwall's advance from Weymouth. In 1795 or 1796 the young wife of Thomas Channing, whom she had poisoned, was strangled at Maumbury and burned at the stake, and for a long time the public gallows stood on the site of the prehistoric sun temple and later colosseum.

In digging out the old moat which Henry VIII. put around Hampton court, the palace of the Tudors and the Stuarts, in 1536, many curious relics have been discovered—old Tudor brick of purple, crimson and rose colors; a delicately wrought panel of Jane Seymour's arms. Bits of the king's beads; stone and glass bottles which the court reveler in the days of Elizabeth flung from the windows into the waters of the moat; comb and toilet knick-knacks; dozens of clay pipes of the time of William III; oyster shells from his majesty's table.

"How far is it to Gloomsville?" we ask of the native who is leaving over the gate.

"Ten miles, straight ahead," he answers.

"But we met a man a little way back and he said it was only two miles."

"Short fat man, drivin' a flea-bit ten sorrel horse?"

"That's the man."

"Did ye meet him or pass him?"

"We passed him."

"Thought so. He's drivin' a balker I traded him, an' he didn't want his horse to know how much funder it had to go."

If you could have what you wanted, would you want it?

INDIANS WITNESS STATUE UNVEILING

NORTH DAKOTA TRIBESMEN AT INTERESTING CEREMONY IN BISMARCK.

SQUAW IS HONORED

Five Redskins in Native Garb Present at Dropping of Flag.

Bismarck, North Dakota.—At the capitol, when the statue of Sakakawea, the Bird woman, was unveiled recently, were five Indians in their native dress, representatives of tribes now living in the state—Sioux, Shoshone, Arickara and Grosventre. As the statue was in honor of the Indian woman who acted as guide for the Lewis and Clarke explorers when they made their trip to the Pacific coast and return, it was fitting that representatives of the disappearing race or red men should sit where they did, around the speakers' platform in the capitol. While the monument was being unveiled the Indians were grouped about the pedestal.

Crow Ghost was one of the most interesting of the Indians. He is an Arickara of the old school and, dressed in his buckskin suit and elaborate feathered headdress, he looked the typical redskin of the old days. Solon of visage, without a sign to indicate that he was taking any interest in the talk going on, it could still be seen that he was alive to his surroundings and their significance. Crow Ghost has two sons, High Flying Eagle and Hanson Crow Ghost. The latter is attending school at Carlisle.

Crow Ghost does not speak English, but with Peter Beauchamp acting as interpreter he told of some of his early experiences. He said that while he was never engaged in battle he had acted as scout on various occasions and had been connected with several small wars. Crow Ghost is engaged in farming, and with the assistance of his son is one of the successful tillers of the reservation.

Nattie Johnson is a Shoshone and of the same tribe as Sakakawea. She is a type of the Indian maiden of story, straight and tall, with a wealth of straight black hair hanging down to her waist in long braids. At the ceremony in the capitol she was dressed in a buckskin suit decorated with beads and other ornaments. Her complexion is clear and her features regular.

She is a graduate of the Haskell government school and at the present time is employed in the Bismarck school as instructor in the laundry department. Miss Johnson talks well of her life and work and is clever in every way. Her father's name is Honee, and she often is amused at the efforts of white persons to get the proper pronunciation.

Peter H. Beauchamp, another Arickara present, is one of the most successful Indian farmers on the Berthod reservation and is doing much for the betterment of his brothers in the way of getting them acquainted with better methods in farming and living. Mr. Beauchamp attended school at the government school at Ft. Stephenson and later was graduated from Hampton.

James Holding Eagle was present, too. He was one of the young Indian men who went to Chicago to pass upon the model for the statue of Sakakawea. He is a Grosventre and the son of Moves Slowly, one of the most noted medicine men of the tribe, and of Scattered Corn, the only woman of the tribe who has ever been vested with the honors of a "medicine man."

Holding Eagle was graduated from the Santee school. He takes a great pride in doing religious work among his people, is an accomplished musician and has been delegate to church meetings in the state. He has also been employed at various times by the State Historical society in making models of old villages and in arranging historical data for publication.

Another delegate was Martin Levens one of the younger Grosventres, who is attending the Bismarck Indian school. His Indian name is Black Cloud, and his father's name was Hard Horn. His parents are farmers on the Berthod reservation, and he intends, as soon as he completes his education to engage in the same business.

Both James Holding Eagle and Black Cloud said when asked about Sakakawea that they had no recollection of hearing their relatives talk of her until after the movement for a monument was started. Holding Eagle stated that when Sakakawea died she was taken back to her old Shoshone home in western Montana, for burial. Nothing is known of what became of the child she carried on her back on the trip to the Pacific coast and return, nor of her other children.

Martini Little Warrior, a Sioux of Dakota, of the Yankton branch of the tribe, was another interested Indian present. She has attended school at Ft. Yates, but is now at Bismarck school. Her father's Indian name is Zuyachika, which translated means Little Warrior, and her mother's name is Mary Four Claws.

Many a man heads a long funeral procession who never had much of a following in life.

SHIP GOES ON ROCKS

Passengers and Crew of Cottage City Take to Boats.

Most of Them Land at a Small Settlement on Vancouver Island—Rest Believed Safe.

Victoria, B. C., Jan. 28.—The Pacific steamer Cottage City, of the Pacific Coast Steamship line, bound from Seattle to Alaska, with fifty-seven passengers and a crew of sixty men, went on the rocks off Cape Mudge, B. C., and now lies on her starboard side on the reef. Seventeen minutes after the vessel struck Captain A. C. Jensen ordered all hands into the boats and the ship was abandoned.

Though a blinding snowstorm was raging and a heavy fog prevailed, all the passengers and crew were taken off safely. They rowed four miles to Campbell River, a small settlement on Vancouver island, where all except one boatload had arrived late at night.

The missing boat, in charge of Second Mate Anderson, is believed to have landed at some other settlement.

FEARS FOR WILSON'S SAFETY

American Ambassador at Ranch in Region of Mexican Uprising.

City of Mexico, Jan. 28.—Some apprehension is felt here for the safety of Mr. Wilson, the American ambassador, who is spending a vacation on a plantation owned by Eman L. Beck, an American baker of Mexico City, at Texupec, state of Oaxaca, where a few days ago an uprising against the government occurred.

It was stated at the embassy that Mr. Wilson was expected to return on Monday. A telegram received from him intimates everything is all right, but as the plantation employs more than 800 contract laborers, it is feared some accident may happen Wilson.

DOWIE'S WIDOW STRICKEN

Mrs. Dowie Suffering from Paralysis and Condition is Serious.

Muskegon, Mich., Jan. 28.—Paralyzed in the left shoulder so that she cannot lift her arm, with the paralysis apparently spreading all over her left side, Mrs. Jane Dowie, the widow of the late John Alexander Dowie, is in a critical condition at her home, Ben MacDhul, near Whitehall.

Mrs. Dowie was taken ill three weeks ago and has suffered a severe relapse, and her condition seems to be growing steadily worse. Her son, A. J. Gladstone Dowie, came home hurriedly from the southern part of the state, to be at his mother's bedside.

STANLEY-BURNS CONTEST

Sensational 10-Round Bout Ends With Both Boys Fighting.

New York, Jan. 28.—In point of ring science, clean blows landed and clever defense, Digger Stanley, England's bantam champion, could have received the decision at the end of a sensational ten-round bout with Frankie Burns of Jersey City at the National Sporting club here.

Some of the spectators thought that Burns won, while others believed a draw would have been a fair decision, but those who knew the merits of the game and looked carefully for points, were sure the Englishman won.

JOSEPH W. REINHART DEAD

Kansas City Capitalist Dies Suddenly of Pneumonia.

Kansas City, Jan. 28.—Joseph W. Reinhart, president of the Inter-City Viaduct and Terminal Railway company, and former president of the Santa Fe Railroad company, died here of pneumonia.

The death of Mr. Reinhart was sudden and unexpected. His widow, three daughters and a son survive.

CAPUCHIN LIFE IN DETROIT, MICH.

MONKS DO EXCELLENT WORK AMONG PEOPLE TO RELIEVE DISTRESS.

LEAD SIMPLE LIFE

Monastery in Vicinity of Mt. Elliott Cemetery One of Good Works.

Detroit, Michigan.—The casual stroller in the vicinity of Mt. Elliott cemetery often meets a bearded man, barefooted save for rude sandals, and clad in a coarse robe of brown material girdled with a rope and hooded with a long, peaked cowl. It is a Capuchin monk, from the monastery of St. Bonaventure, abroad on some errand of mercy, or perhaps to perform the offices of some priest who is forced to be absent from his parish. The dress of the man is peculiar and attracts the attention of the curious, but should you engage the monk in conversation, you would find in him a man of rather unusual scholarly attainments, of kindly manner and simple, earnest attitude toward life.

Whatever may be one's opinion of the value of the monastic institution, there is something in the self-renunciation of these men that challenges the admiration of the most frivolous. There is a fascination in the contrast between the hubbub of the outer world and the restful quiet of the monastery that deeply impresses even the worldly man who is permitted a peep within, and leads him to ask if, after all, these men in somber garments have not discovered the best way out of the perplexities of existence and the best solution of the world problem.

Push the button at the door beneath the arched entrance; a loud gong in the inner hall will announce your coming, and soon a brown-robed brother will open to you and give you a courteous greeting. Your first impression of the interior as you are led into the reception room is of severe simplicity with perfect cleanliness. The monks are good housekeepers, setting an excellent example for all keepers of bachelor apartments. The rooms are bare except for the most necessary furniture. There are no carpets, and the chairs are of the unsophisticated straight backed variety. On the walls are a few religious pictures of the kind familiar in Catholic institutions.

The building surrounds a pretty inner court, after the manner of European monasteries. Here at recreation time you may find one or more of the fathers strolling among the flowers and palms which border the walks and are sprayed by the waters of a tiny fountain. An ancient tree or two affords shade, and the ivy creeping over the gray walls gives one the impression of venerableness which one associates with monastic architecture.

If it happens to be at the hour of the vespers you may see the monks in procession coming from their dining hall and chanting as they pass. The sight is most interesting and impressive. This life in which religion is continually given first place, so that in his downslitting and his uprising, in his meals and at his work, in fact, in every waking moment of his life, the monk seems to be engaged in prayer or praise, sets the worldly man thinking.

The routine of life in a monastery is most exacting. At 4:30 the monks are awakened by a gong and promptly arise. Fifteen minutes are devoted to the toilet; then the day is begun with private prayer and meditation. At 5:30 mass is celebrated in the chapel, and at 7 o'clock the monks repair to the dining room for breakfast. The meal consists of bread and coffee and is taken in absolute silence, according to the vows of the order.

After the breakfast the fathers retire to study and the brothers begin their daily tasks; some go to the garden, others wash the dishes, meanwhile reciting the rosary. Still others do the chamberwork, while others are busy in bakery, laundry and all the departments of a large household.

At 11:30 dinner is ready and again in silence the monks take their places at the long dining tables. As the simple meal proceeds, one brother after another reads aloud for the edification of all. There is no conversation. For an hour after the midday meal, the fathers have recreation, during which they are at liberty to converse for the first time of the day. At this time they stroll about the lawns and even engage in a game of croquet in the shade of the big trees in the rear of the monastery.

During this hour the brothers are again washing the dishes, darning the clatter with the reading of their prayers in unison. At 1:30 all retire to their rooms for meditation. At 2 o'clock they assemble for vespers, after which the fathers again study while the brothers betake themselves to the garden. At 5 o'clock they reassemble for matins, anticipated order. Supper is taken with the usual reading and 7 o'clock finds all in their rooms for study. At 8 o'clock last prayers of the day are offered and by 9 o'clock all lights must be out; the monks sleep in their cells.

A man is down in the world when he's on his upper lip.

RENEW BOYCOTT FIGHT IN COURT

Attorneys for Capital and Labor Argue Buck's Case.

SUPREME COURT IS TRIBUNAL

Issue is Whether the Officials of the American Federation of Labor Are to Go to Jail on Contempt Charges.

Washington, Jan. 28.—One of the most spectacular legal battles ever waged between capital and organized labor reached its final stages when the supreme court took up for oral argument the famous litigation by the Buck's Store and Range company of St. Louis, Mo., against the American Federation of Labor.

The contending forces started their fight to determine the legality of the "boycott." That was in the supreme court of the District of Columbia. But when the contest was renewed before the supreme court of the United States the main issue had been crowded out of the limelight by an incidental one.

Now the burning issue is whether the principal officials of the American Federation of Labor are to go to jail on charges of contempt of court.

Because they failed to obey the injunction issued by the District supreme court in the original case, Samuel Gompers, president of the federation, is under sentence to serve twelve months in jail; John Mitchell, vice president of the federation, to serve nine months, and Frank Morrison, its secretary, to serve six months.

Fighting for the American Federation of Labor and its officials are Alton B. Parker, former Democratic presidential candidate; Jackson H. Radston, Frederick L. Siddons, William E. Richardson, and John T. Walker. Opposed to them as the representatives of the Buck's Store and Range company are Daniel Davenport and J. J. Darlington.

After the arguments had proceeded for an hour or more, Mr. Davenport made the suggestion that so far as the injunction was concerned it was no longer a live question. He explained that the Buck's Store and Range company had adjusted its troubles with the labor unions and was no longer seeking to maintain the injunction. He advised the court that it was a moot case. Thereupon counsel on both sides with consent of the court, the arguments on the sufficiency of the injunction were cut short and thereafter the lawyers argued as to whether the constitutional rights of the defendants had been infringed by their being enjoined from speaking and writing in criticism of the corporation which petitioned for the injunction. Judge Parker had not ended his argument when court adjourned.

Lone Bandit Robs Passengers of Train and Is Shot in Chase.

Pueblo, Colo., Jan. 28.—Just after the Texas limited on the Colorado and Southern had left the Union station, a lone bandit who gave his name as Al Buckley when captured, held up the passengers of two rear coaches. He secured over $100, some watches and jewelry, then pulled the bell cord and as the train slowed down leaped off.

Special Agent William McCafferty of the Rio Grande road, was in a forward car when he heard there was a robber aboard and rushed back. He saw Buckley jump and followed, opening fire. A bullet shattered Buckley's wrist and, as his revolver dropped, he threw up his left hand and surrendered.

SCHENK DENOUNCES WIFE

Bitterly Disappointed Because She Was Not Convicted.

Wheeling, W. Va., Jan. 28.—In his first public interview since the arrest of his wife on the charge of poisoning him with arsenic and acetate of lead, John Schenk said that he would never take his wife back, even if she should eventually be acquitted of the charge. He was bitterly disappointed at the failure of the jury to agree on a verdict of guilty and declared that he would not, unless forced to, stand any of the expenses of his wife's first trial. Mr. Schenk declared with emphasis that he would never give up his children to the woman unless forced to by the courts.

VERIFY IT

THE PROOF IS IN DIXON ALMOST AT YOUR DOOR.

The statement of a Dixon citizen is in itself strong proof for Dixon people, but confirmation strengthens the evidence.

Here is a Dixon citizen who testified years ago that Doan's Kidney Pills relieved sick kidneys and now states the cure was permanent. Can any sufferer from kidney ills ask better proof? You can investigate. The case is right at home.

Mrs. W. H. Randall, 423 College Ave., Dixon, Ill., says: "Doan's Kidney Pills have been used in our home with the best of results and I feel that I cannot praise them too highly. One member of the family suffered for some time from backache and severe pains across the kidneys, and Doan's Kidney Pills, procured at Leake Bros. & Co.'s drug store brought prompt relief, removing all symptoms of kidney complaint. We value this remedy very highly."

(Statement, given April 14, 1909.)
A Lasting Effect.
On Jan. 11, 1910, Mrs. Randall said: "Doan's Kidney Pills made a permanent cure in the case of a member of our family. I still have great confidence in this remedy and willingly permit the further publication of my former statement in its favor."

CONVICT CAPTURED

Ralph Taylor, Who Escaped from Sing Sing, in Cell Again.

Ossining, N. Y., Jan. 28—Ralph Taylor, who escaped from Sing Sing prison with William Bush and Charles McGinn after assaulting two keepers, is back again in his cell, having been captured at Bedford station by Chief of Police See of that village.

He had traveled the twelve miles without rest and was hungry and completely exhausted. Taylor told the warden that he separated from his companions in the yard and after climbing the iron fence at the north-west corner of the prison grounds, went out on the ice in the river and made his way around the north wall where he stepped on land and started on his way east.

JOLIET TRAINS KILL TWO

Accidents Bring Total of Fatalities on Rock Island in City to Six.

Joliet, Ill., Jan. 28—Frank Doyle, a Rock Run farmer, was struck and killed by a Rock Island train, and Stephen Bambeck, 704 North Center street, was run down on the same road near the court house in this city.

There have been eight accidents on the Rock Island in two weeks in Joliet, six fatal.

GUNBOAT CREW SENTENCED

Men Who Survived Explosion Found Guilty of Mutiny and Must Die.

Port-au-Prince, Hayti, Jan. 28—All the officers and crew who survived the loss of the Hatien gunboat Liberte last October, were convicted by a court martial and sentenced to death.

The prisoners were found guilty of mutiny, which led to the killing of the admiral in command of the Liberte, and of several Haytien generals who were being taken to the northern part of the republic to take over the command of government troops. There was an explosion on the gunboat which set fire to the vessel and she soon foundered, carrying with her all on board except those sentenced to die.

CHICAGO FACING CARMEN'S STRIKE

Traction Employees Threaten to Tie Up Surface Lines.

WAGE DIFFERENCES IS CAUSE

Mayor Busse Intervenes in Effort to Settle Dispute Between Carmen and Traction Officials—Expect Crisis Monday.

Chicago, Jan. 28.—Chicago is declared to be threatened with one of the greatest labor disturbances in its history. Strike of 8,000 street car men, meaning a tie-up of all the surface lines in the city, is possible on account of differences between the scale of wages paid by the Chicago Railways company and the Chicago City Railway company. So serious has the situation become that Mayor Busse has intervened in an effort to prevent a possible repetition of the scenes of violence and bloodshed which marked the last street car strike in Chicago, and have accompanied labor struggles in other cities.

For more than an hour Mayor Busse was closeted with representatives of the city and street car men's labor organizations in his private office. No agreement was reached at the conference. The street car men were firm in their stand. Immediately after the conference John M. Roach, president of the Chicago Railways, and Thomas E. Mitten, president of the Chicago City Railway, were notified from the mayor's office that their presence is desired at another meeting, which will be held in the executive offices of the city Monday at 2 p. m.

"Chicago seems close to serious trouble, and if the men are as determined as their statements would indicate, the companies may have a strike on their hands," declared Mayor Busse after the conference. "Every effort will be used to prevent it and a satisfactory settlement is hoped for at the meeting Monday."

Rumored intention of the Chicago Railways company to eliminate some of the features of its wage scale which are especially remunerative to the men and a demand which has been quietly fostered among the men of the City Railway to secure these advantages is, in a nutshell, the motive force behind the move that culminated in the meeting.

The wage contracts under which the companies operate are different. The contention of some of the labor leaders is that they are the same and that Mr. Fisher, when he represented the companies or the city in drawing the papers, assured them that they were the same. Both were put in effect Aug. 1, 1909, and run to Aug. 1, 1912. Comparison of them shows that as printed in the official organ of the street car men the contracts differ radically, especially on the points now in controversy.

The big difference is that though a man may work only an hour or so he receives pay on the west and north sides for an entire eight hours. On the south side he is paid only for the hours he actually works.

"All trainmen making extra trips after completing their regular schedule trips shall receive 33 cents per hour. Should trainmen be relieved from duty before a day's work is completed, they shall be allowed eight hours," is the clause in the contract with the Chicago Railways which has started the trouble. It does not exist in the contract with south side men.

WOMAN LAWYER DEAD

Mrs. Ella Knowles Haskell, Noted as Attorney, Dies in Butte, Mont.

Butte, Mont., Jan. 28.—Mrs. Ella Knowles Haskell, formerly assistant attorney general of Montana, and one of the foremost women lawyers in the United States, died here after a short illness. She was a native of North Ridge, N. H., where she was born, 46 years ago, and where her father, the only known surviving relative, still resides.

As Ella Knowles she was prominent in Montana politics years ago and was the Populist nominee for attorney general in 1893, opposing Henry J. Haskell, Republican. Haskell defeated her and he appointed her one of his assistants. Later she married Haskell, but in a few years divorced him and came to Butte, where she opened a law office and was very successful.

JOHNSON TO MEET KAUFMAN

Jack O'Brien Said to Be Promoting Bout for Fight Fans.

New York, Jan. 28.—It developed that unless there is an unexpected hitch, Jack O'Brien, who is promoting a big boxing club in Philadelphia, will succeed in winning Johnson, the heavyweight champion, to meet Al Kaufman in a six-round bout some time next month.

Kaufman is on his way east from California and O'Brien had a confab with Johnson in Pittsburgh the other day that appears to have been satisfactory. Johnson is anxious to show his skill in Philadelphia in return for a big guarantee for six rounds, and is said to have requested O'Brien to match him with Kaufman.

Volcano of Taal on Island of Luzon Becomes Active Suddenly.

Manila, Jan. 28.—The volcano of Taal, situated on a small island in Bombao lake, Batangas province, Island of Luzon, is in eruption for the first time since 1873. The eruption is accompanied by frequent explosions which can be heard for miles. Great columns of smoke and steam can be seen rising from the crater.

As the result of the outbreak of the volcano the waters of the lake have been lowered fully three inches and numerous earthquake shocks have been felt throughout the island.

CAT ATTACKS BABY IN CRIB

Girl's Hands May Be Amputated as Result of Bites.

Stout Falls, S. D., Jan. 28.—As the result of an attack by the family cat the 4-month-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Fay, residents of Custer county, may lose her right hand and perhaps her life.

The child was attacked while asleep in her crib. It is feared it will be necessary to amputate the injured hand to prevent blood poisoning.

Beir is believed to be the only American killed. His death, it is said, was due to a stray bullet, which struck him while he was in a private residence.

American bluejackets, assisted by British seamen, played an important part during the battle in preserving the neutrality zone, and their work in this connection probably saved the lives of several noncombatants. The commander of the government troops was prevented from placing machine guns on neutral ground at the point of bayonets in the hands of sailors.

GEN. GUERRERO DIES IN BATTLE

Cebal, Honduras, Is Taken by Bonilla's Forces.

FIGHTING LASTED THREE HOURS

Louis Beir of New Orleans Believed Only American Killed—Neutrality Zone Preserved by U. S. Bluejackets.

New Orleans, Jan. 28.—Advises from Puerto Cortez, Honduras, by wireless say that Cebal has been taken by Bonilla's forces. Commandant Guerrero was killed and twenty of his men wounded. The fighting lasted three hours. The Tacoma landed sixty sailors at night. The Hornet is at Truxillo and the American gunboat Marietta at Cebal.

Details of the big battle between the revolutionists and the government forces indicate the casualties to have been twelve insurgents and eight government troops killed and seventy men, mostly from the attacking party, wounded. General Francisco Guerrero, commandant of the garrison and the governor of Cebal, and Louis Beir of New Orleans were among those killed. The government forces finally sought refuge in the neutral zone, and after the battle they were turned over to the revolutionary leaders. General Diaz was among the prisoners taken.

The death of General Guerrero was tragic. While turning from one street to another in which the firing was going on with great vigor he was shot through the back, but kept at the head of his command until he was overcome by the loss of blood and fell from his horse.

Beir is believed to be the only American killed. His death, it is said, was due to a stray bullet, which struck him while he was in a private residence.

American bluejackets, assisted by British seamen, played an important part during the battle in preserving the neutrality zone, and their work in this connection probably saved the lives of several noncombatants. The commander of the government troops was prevented from placing machine guns on neutral ground at the point of bayonets in the hands of sailors.

There is a lodge of over 700 members in Rockford and during the past four years the order claims a growth of 100,000 members in the country. Nine cities in Illinois have been organized. The smallest lodge in this state, Belvidere, has a membership of 200. Few cities as small as Dixon have been solicited, but Mr. Burkitt believes Dixon can have a large lodge.
